This image shows a blank, multi-page character sheet for a tabletop RPG, likely Dungeons & Dragons. The sheet is organized into several sections:

- CANTRIPS: A section for tracking cantrips, featuring a header box with the number "0" and a list of empty lines for notes.
- SPELL LEVEL: A section for tracking spell slots by level, from 0 to 9. Each level has a header box with the level number and a list of empty lines for notes.
- SLOTS TOTAL: A column for tracking the total number of slots available at each level.
- SLOTS EXPENDED: A column for tracking the number of slots used at each level.
- SPELL NAME: A column for listing the names of spells prepared at each level.
- PREPARED: A column for marking which spells have been prepared.
- SPELLS KNOWN: A column for tracking the total number of spells known at each level.

The sheet is designed to be printed on multiple pages, with vertical lines separating the columns and horizontal lines separating the rows within each column.
